Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law requires every brewer, manufacturer, bottler, rectifier, wholesaler or retailer of alcohol beverages to make the books, papers and records of that business available to any authorized employees of the department of justice and the department of revenue and any sheriff, police officer, marshal or constable, within their respective jurisdictions, for the purpose of determining compliance with this state’s alcohol beverage laws. Any refusal to permit such examination is sufficient grounds for revocation or suspension of any license or permit granted for the sale of alcohol beverages.

This bill specifies that any person licensed to sell alcohol beverages at retail for consumption on the premises where sold is required to maintain current employment and personnel records on the licensed premises whenever open for business, and must make those records available for inspection.
